

Mom Most Traveled

Family Game Nights

One of the many things I imagined myself doing once I became a parent was playing all kinds of fun games with my children.

I recently read this post on TimeToPlayMag.com about the importance and fun of having a Family Game Night and it made me reflect on the history of game nights in my life.

It was no secret to me that my mom hated playing Chutes and Ladders, but her and my dad kept my brother and I well supplied with games, which we played with each other and our neighborhood friends.

Even though my children are young, Jojo and I have enjoyed playing games with conversation-starting questions like Hanukkah Box of Questions and Family Talk.