

New Around the Table Games Review + Giveaway

Want to know what kids talk about? Then go talk to a kid! No kidding! That's what Beth Daniels, owner of Around The Table Games did when she wanted to add new titles to her award-winning line of games, "Family Talk" and "Grandparent Talk." Three new versions of the game, Camp Talk, Buddy Talk, and Teen Talk were each inspired and created for kids, by kids. So, no matter where they are, kids can engage in colorful conversations with new friends or learn things they never knew about old pals and family members.

My kids and I were able to check out 2 of the 3 new available games, Buddy Talk and Teen Talk, and we really enjoyed them both.

We put Buddy Talk to good use on our weekly carpooling to dance classes with a bunch of 8 year old girls. We also brought it on the train during our recent trip to D.C. for my 10 year old son and 8 year old daughter to use. My children really enjoyed them and I enjoyed listening to all the different responses. I think these are a wonderful idea and can see us using them over and over again. The suggested age on buddy talk is 7+ and I found that age to be right on target.

Here's a small sample of the questions included in Buddy Talk:

- What's your favorite thing about summer break?
- If you could have picked your own name, what would it be?
- What is the funniest trick your pet can do?

My 14 year old checked out the teen talk and thought it was pretty cool, which is a ringing endorsement from any teen.

Here's a small sample of the questions included in Teen Talk:

- What is one thing you couldn't live without?
- What influences you the most?
- What is the weirdest dream you've ever had?
- Do you think guys/girls act or talk differently online than they do in person? Why?
- What would be the title of YOUR autobiography?
